Have you ever found an opportunity on BC Bid that looked perfect for your organization, but writing a submission to it was overwhelming? Or maybe you've participated in some RFPs, but aren't sure how the award was made.

If this sounds familiar – or you are just interested in learning more about how the Province awards contracts – join us for a one-day workshop lead by Liz Busch, the principal author of the Short-Form RFP template and guidance, as well as many of the pages found on BC Bid Resources

This workshop will include evaluating proposals using the government's process, which will help you to understand the process in order to write better proposals.
